Welcome delegates!

As many of you may know, GAC committees are for resourceful and creative delegates. It is a place to develop critical and strategic thinking, we will be expecting a great performance from all of you. This committee does not have a guide on the topic, but a procedure guide instead, one that we highly recommend you to read. A brief guide will be shared with you during the first day of debate, everything that you will need to know regarding the first event of the committee, will be there. However, this does not mean that you should not come prepared. We encourage you to read about the events that happened on September 11th of 2001, including all sides and relevant political perspectives, as well as actions taken after the attack, and actions that lead to the attack itself. Additionally, remember to have a full investigation on the delegation you will be representing.

If you need any sort of guidance or doubt, do not hesitate to contact any of us, or a member of the general academic team of TVSMUNXIII.

GAC Procedure Guide

Welcome delegates, to the TVSMUNXIII GAC Procedure Guide.

This is the first time our school will include the GAC committee on the model. That is why we are looking forward to witness an excellent performance from you delegates; this includes not only the debating abilities, but the writing and strategic abilities as well.

It is important to mention that the Crisis team will be very demanding regarding the procedure on the GAC experience; so we highly recommend you to keep in mind the most important aspects of this brief guide.

1. Directives.

The directives are one of the most important aspects of the GAC committee. It is the method that allows the delegate to make official moves on the committee that will affect both sides of the conflict, and the course of the storyline itself. That is why it is very important for you delegates to know the structure of these directives, because, if this structure fails to be fulfilled, your directives will be denied.

Structure:

The following is an example of what your directives MUST have in order to be approved by both the Chair and the Crisis team.

Date, Hour.
Directive: Public or Private. (If it is private, include the word CIFRATED)
Content: The content of a directive must be very specific. It should include numbers, figures, percentages (if needed), purpose, amounts and actors, in case it involves any type of monetary requirements.
<ul style="list-style-type: none">- If it includes military or hard power methods, it should include: amounts, types of whatever tool you are going to use (type of attack plane, attack ship etc...), troops, geographical location, purpose and actors.- If it involves a situation, the directive must be very specific regarding what will happen, in this way, both the Chair and the Crisis committee will be able to keep these actions in track and give the final verdict.
*Keep in mind that if any directive that does not specify if it is public or private, it will automatically be passed as public (if it includes every other aspect in the list).
*Furthermore, keep in mind that your performance with the directive-writing process helps on the criterias for the academic awards.
Signs: Official Name of the country.

2. Portafolio Papers

The portafolio papers, are those written messages in which a certain delegation requests to know a specific piece information, whether it is to the Chair or to the Crisis team. These requests are very important for every delegation, because if lacking specific information, no move will be approved by the Chair nor the Crisis team. This is another document with a specific format that you must follow; which is the following:

Portafolio Paper

The delegation of _____ requests to know how many _____ has available by the current date _____.
